P&H files eminent domain suit for property school district covets

BY RICHARD MEEK
An ongoing dispute over a valued tract of land adjacent to Hancock High School took another legal twist on Wednesday when the Hancock County Port & Harbor filed eminent domain proceedings against the property owners.

The condemnation suit came just two days after Circuit Judge Jerry Terry threw out an eminent domain suit filed against the property owners by the Hancock County School District.

The school district and the Port & Harbor Commission have been in a legal tussle over the 20-acre tract since last summer. The district claims the land is needed to build a new middle school.

P&H officials said the property is required for expansion of Stennis International Airport. They maintain that the property would be used for relocation of a cargo carrier at the airport, but admitted no such project is near.

Expansion of Stennis was the basis for the suit filed on Wednesday. The suit claims the P&H has a "need for such facilities for the continued expansion and economic development of Stennis International Airport."

Waste Authority makeup decided

BY ED LEPOMA
After months of public and private wrangling, the two cities and Hancock County have agreed on the makeup of a Regional Solid Waste Management Authority.

A consensus was reached last Monday in a Board of Supervisors meeting, then endorsed by the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland in a meeting of the Solid Waste District last Wednesday.

The District authorized attorney Lucien Gex to once again advertise the formation of the Authority in the Echo, the county newspaper of record.

Supervisors have now agreed that the makeup of the board can include one elected official and one member appointed by the mayor of each of the cities. In the case of Bay St. Louis, the appointee would need approval of City Council.

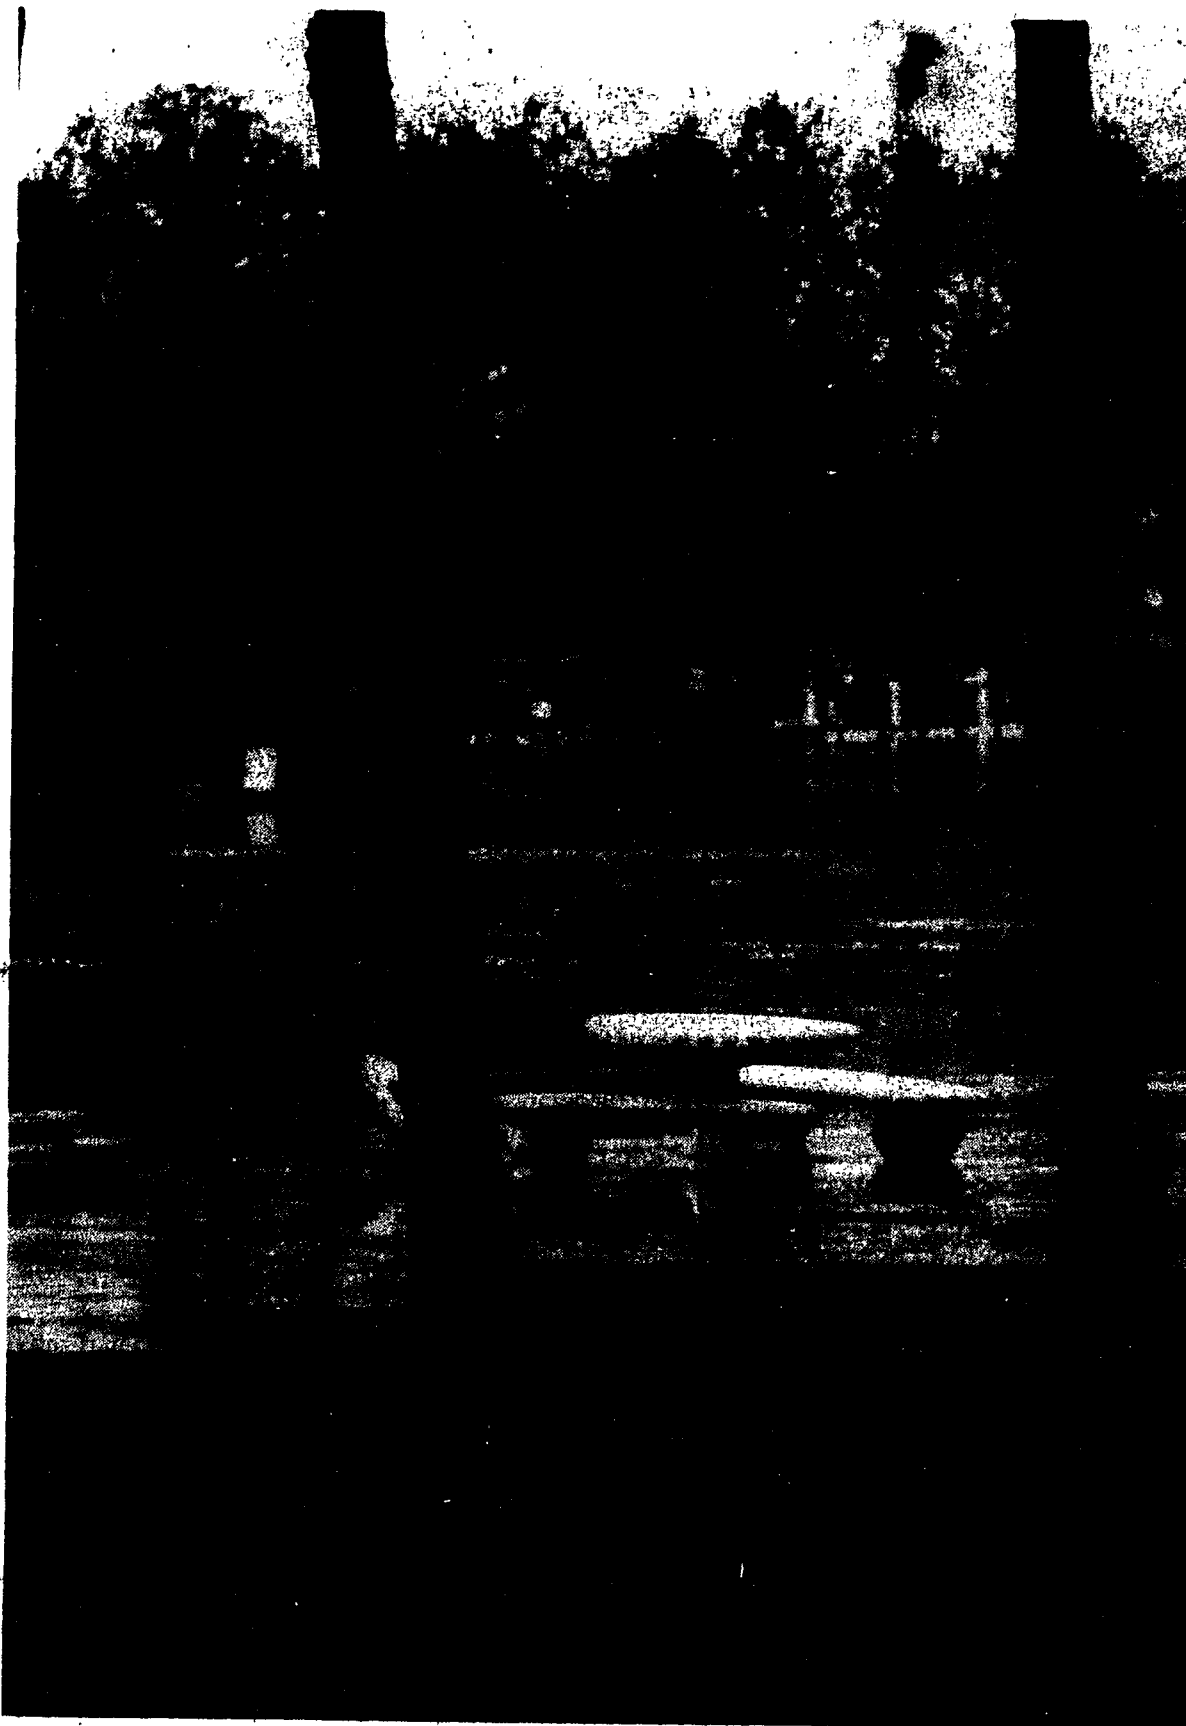

Supervisors have announced their intention that they plan to appoint two elected officials to represent the county on the Authority, which will chart the course of how Hancock will dispose of its garbage and rubbish in the future.

Under terms of the agreement, a unanimous vote of the six-member Authority is needed before rates can be raised, contracts can be signed or any capital expenditures can be made. A unanimous vote would also be required before the Authority can issue bonds or notes.

The Authority will be charged with finding land, preferably in the buffer zone surrounding Stennis, for a combination landfill/rubbish site. It would have the power to eminent domain land, which the former body (District) could not do.

Last week, the Bay St. Louis City Council appointed Mayor

D'head woman dies in wreck

A 39-year-old resident of Diamondhead was killed early Saturday morning when her car went through the railing of the Bayou Talla bridge on the Kiln-Picayune Hwy.

Hancock County Deputy Sheriff Nathan (Corky) Hod identified the victim as Benita Robison. Hoda said she was alone in the Mazda compact car headed west, and apparently lost control in the curve approaching the bridge.

She had to be extracted from the vehicle, Hoda said, and was pronounced dead on the scene by county coroner Norma Stiglet.

Hoda said the accident was called in at 6:57 a.m. Saturday, and traffic was halted in both directions for two hours while deputies and rescue units worked at the scene. The cause of the accident is under investigation, awaiting lab. results, Hoda said.

Other deputies on scene included Phil Johnson, Burt Johnson, Rita Watson and James Roundtree.

Robison was a longtime employee of Rooster's Restaurant in the Kiln, and a native of Cotton Port, La.

A spokesman for Edmond Fahy funeral home said the body was sent to Escude Funeral Home in Mansura, La., with burial in Mater Dolorosa Cemetery in Placherville, La.

Pearlington to form water district

BY ED LEPOMA
All five members of Hancock County's Wastewater District 1 voted Monday to allow Pearlington to withdraw from its boundaries.

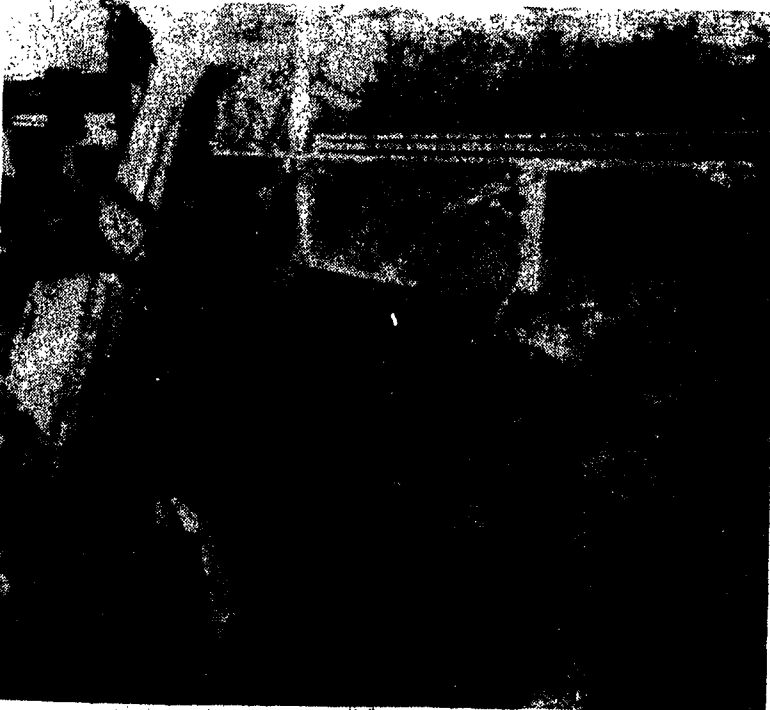

Residents, led by Wayne Atkinson, earlier received approval from county supervisors to form their own water and sewer district.

The citizens claim they can install a combined system, and customer fees will be cheaper than the $35 a month now charged by Hancock County Wastewater District 1.

The group is exploring options for getting federal and state grants to pay for installation of the water-sewer system, but needed to form their own district to begin the long application process.

The next step is for supervisors to appoint a five-member board that will govern the district and later set customer fees.

In Memoriam

In Loving Memory of
DELORES SHUBERT
 Aug. 29, 1938-Jan. 14, 1998

In Remembrance of
 Our Loving Mother
 The day God called my Momma home.

God looked around his garden, he found an empty place, He looked down upon this earth, saw Momma's tired face.

He put His arms around her and called her home to rest. God's garden must be beautiful, He always takes the best.

He knew that she was suffering, He knew she was in pain. He also knew that she would never get well on earth again.

The road was getting rough, the hills were hard to climb, so God closed her weary eyes, whispered "Peace be thine."

It broke our hearts to lose our Mom, she didn't go alone. Part of us went with her when God called Momma home.

God saw our broken hearts and the tears in our eyes. He wrapped his arms around us to give us peace of mind.

God with his blessed assurance placed loving memories of our Mother in our hearts that will never die.

P&H may lose lease with casino

BY RICHARD MEEK

The clock is ticking on the Hancock County Port & Harbor's lease with a proposed casino in Diamondhead that would net the P&H nearly $500,000 a year.

The P&H has an agreement in place with officials of Casino World to lease the water bottoms for an estimated $490,000 annually. However, an agreement between the P&H and the state Secretary of State stipulates that the casino must be operating by November of this year.

If not, the water bottoms will be returned to the state, and the casino revenue added to the state Tideland funds.

P&H Executive Director Hal Walters said he and two county supervisors met last fall with Secretary of State Eric Clark in an effort to obtain an extension beyond the November date.

"We did not get an answer," Walters said. "If we don't get an extension, it could derail the project. We would be completely out of it."

A spokesman for Clark acknowledged the meeting but said no decision on the extension has been reached. The meeting between county officials and Clark came when Imperial Palace was facing legal challenges to open in Biloxi.

The spokesman said Clark would revisit the extension request once the November date draws near.

"It seems like a 30- to 60-day extension is not a big thing," P&H Commissioner Curtis Colson said.

Casino World has received permitting to build a casino and hotel complex in the north Bay of St. Louis, near Diamondhead. However, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has not given the casino the written permits, although verbally the project has been approved. The project cannot begin without a written permit.

"We know they will get the permit but we're not sure when," Walters said. "I was told the Corps is waiting until the Pine Hills suit is settled."

Several environmental groups are attempting to block construction of a casino in the Pine Hills area in Harrison County, which sits near the Casino World site.

"It will be difficult for (Casino World) to be up and running by November," Walters said.

"(Clark) is playing games with you," Commissioner Harry Farve told Walters.

Colson said he wants the casino "to have as much success as possible."

"Maybe not," said Commissioner Lou Hall, a Diamondhead resident and a Casino World opponent.

In other matters: —The P&H will pave Road D at Stennis International Air-park to connect with Texas Flat Road, which is in the process of being widened and repaved. And Deputy Director William Stovall said he will approach the FAA about picking up some of the cost for the paving.

Stovall said a grant is paying for the resurfacing of existing taxiways and the ramp, and since some of Road D extends to the airfield, FAA funds may be available.

"It's a slim chance," he admitted.

All of Road D is scheduled to be repaved.

—Board President Dave McDonald was re-elected and will serve his seventh term. Farve was re-elected secretary and Hall, treasurer.

—The Commission will explore ways to more evenly divide the cost of maintaining a security guard at the front gate, and another at the soon-to-be opened rear gate at Port Bienvenue Industrial Park. Currently, each business at the park pays $500 per month to fund the 24-hour security at the front gate. When completed, the rear gate is expected to be open for only 10 hours a day.

Gulf Coast Mental Health has asked for relief for Hancock Industries' monthly obligation of $500 towards security.

A recent expansion project at Hancock Industries helped the P&H secure a state grant that was used for renovation of the water tower at the park.

"Without Hancock Industries, we would have had a hard time refurbishing the water tower," he said.

Attorney Robert Genin said the Commission must look at the methodology of allocating the costs. McDonald suggested the use of appraisals to determine each company's share.

"Each person should be responsible for their own security," Farve suggested.

—Wellman has contracted past the $40 million in incentive funds, so the Commission had to transfer four contracts from those funds to Wellman, so they can be paid directly by Wellman.

The companies and amounts included Phillips Lumber ($79,068.40), Bailey Lumber ($329,703.83), and GM&R ($3,834,250). Jerry Hemphill, acting liaison between the P&H and Wellman, said at least one of the companies had a problem with the transfer because Wellman had been slow paying on previous invoices.

"Do they have a choice," Walters said.

"Yes," said Farve, adding that ultimately the P&H is responsible for any contracts it lets.

"As long as (the vendor) is getting their money, I'm sure they could not care who they are getting the money from," he added.

Supers extend waterfront district

BY ED LEPOMA

Hancock County supervisors have extended for one year the Special Use Waterfront District designation given that tract of land south of Diamond where the Casino World project is planned.

When supervisors adopted a Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance in January of 1997, they singled out the 404-acre site for the special designation, acting on a request by Europa Cruises Corp. The company plans to place two gambling barges in the north Bay of St. Louis, along with a hotel, and RV park and a nine-hole golf course to complement its resort destination.

Supervisors granted the request for one year, and the special designation was to expire if construction had not begun by January, 1998.

At Monday's meeting, John Scafide, the attorney for the Planning Commission, said the request to extend the designation for another year was approved by the Commission at the request of Deborah Vitale, chairperson of Europa Cruises Corp.

In a letter to the Commission, Vitale noted that, "Casino World Inc., is currently in receipt of those federal and state permits required to construct its proposed resort with the exception of the U.S. Army Corps Permit. However, on Dec. 4, 1997, the U.S. Army Corps notified the company that it will issue...a permit in the next few weeks."

Supervisors renewed the designation by a 4-1 vote. Lisa Coward, whose District includes Diamondhead, voted against. Some Diamondhead property owners are among opponents of the proposed casino.

The Army Corps of Engineers permit is needed before any dredging can begin, but Casino World's on-site project manager, Werlin Ladner, disclosed that some site clearing began this week, but was interrupted due to the heavy rain.

Vitale is scheduled to be in town Jan. 22 to deliver an 8 a.m. address to the Diamondhead Business and Professional Association. The address will take place at the Park Ten Bowling Alley.

Company praises Pass safety program

BY ED LEPOMA

The company that administers Pass Christian's workers' compensation and safety and loss control program complimented that city last week on its track record.

In fact, Tom Sawyer, with Sawyer Insurance, Inc., of Gulfport told Mayor Billy McDonald and the Board of Aldermen that their city's program is working so well that Long Beach is wanting to copy it.

"Since its inception in 1994, the Pass Christian/Sawyer's Workers Compensation Program has proven to be one of the most successful...programs of any municipality in the state," according to a written report issued by account executive Calvin Foster. "The city is to be commended for addressing and supporting this program. It has resulted in substantial savings and has also contributed to increased productivity of city employees," said Foster.

A report given to the mayor and aldermen showed average losses have decreased from over $55,000 a year prior to the program to under $10,000 per year since the program inception. The number of claims have also decreased dramatically, according to the report.

The report shows before a safety and loss prevention program was begun in 1994, 31 claims totaled $494,638 for the three-year period, 1991-94.

Claims began to drop in 1994 when the city launched an aggressive safety program involving department heads and recruiting the quick response of emergency medical personnel.

From 1994 to 1995, three claims were filed, totaling $3,656; from 1995 to 1996, there were four claims totaling $26,067; and this past year, 24 claims were filed for a total $10,043.

"That's excellent. You would not believe what other cities are paying in claims," consultant Al Betz told the mayor and aldermen.

Employee cleared

BY ED LEPOMA

Pass Christian's Harbor Master, J.J. Lassabe, has been cleared of personal assault charges filed against him by a Long Beach citizen.

After a brief trial Monday night, City Judge Wes Teel found Lassabe not guilty of charges of alleged assault causing injury on Patrick L. Savarese.

Savarese signed an affidavit against Lassabe after a confrontation between himself and the harbor master that occurred at the Pass Christian municipal harbor on Dec. 5, the night of the city's annual Christmas parade of lighted boats.

Proposed Bay B&B back on agenda

BY MARY G. SEILEY

Plans to make 115 Washington Street into a bed and breakfast are once again on the agenda for city officials' consideration.

Bay St. Louis Planning and Zoning Commission will hear the request at a Jan. 21 meeting at City Hall Annex, at 7:30 p.m.

In July 1995, the commission approved an application by Mike V. Zuppardo for a special exception to the zoning ordinance allowing the establishment — provided that adequate offstreet parking be found to accommodate it. That included one space for each of the six guest rooms, and two for the resident manager.

Zuppardo, however, effectively withdrew his application when the matter went to City Council for action. He said while he could fit that many cars on the lot, it would be cramped if they all were occupied at the same time. Zuppardo had said that fewer than six guest rooms would render the bed and breakfast economically infeasible.

The new owner, Matthew B.A. Matulich, is asking for only four guest rooms, however. He says he has expanded parking on the east and west sides of the dwelling, providing eight spaces. And Matulich says he has additional parking places behind the privacy fence at the structure.

When the request came up in 1995, there were several neighbors in opposition, and several who expressed concerns about the parking, signs and noise that the operation might generate. Others said they had no objections as long as the usual stipulations that the city places on bed and breakfast establishments were made to apply to 115 Washington, as well.

Three arrested on drug charges

BY RICHARD MEEK

Two men were booked on drug charges after the driver was pulled over for speeding in Waveland.

Shane Corr, director of the Hancock County Narcotics Task Force, said Emmitt Galloway, 33, and Clarence Kennedy, 19, both of Bay St. Louis, were arrested and charged with possession of crack cocaine. Corr said Officer Mike Hardy of the Waveland Police Department stopped Galloway on a speeding violation at the corner of McLaurin and St. Joseph streets. An investigation turned up the crack.

Both are being held without bond in the Hancock County

Justice Facility. Galloway was on parole on previous drug charges.

Kennedy was out on bond on previous drug charges. In a separate incident, Cathy Lynn Warf, 36, of Long Beach, was arrested Jan. 9 and booked with possession of crack cocaine, Corr said.

The drug was discovered in her vehicle following a routine traffic stop in Bay St. Louis on Longfellow Drive, Corr added. She was released after posting a $5,000 bond.

"CUEVAS' QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

A story that really caught my eye in Saturday's Times-Picayune was about two young girls, one age five in Lacombe, and the other age six in Abita Springs, La., who were dropped off after school at day-care centers which were closed because of excessive rains on Wednesday.

What a shock for these young girls and "nightmares" for their parents.

It is hard to comprehend things like this happening, but they do when several folks fail to put their thinking caps on.

Incidents such as these should never happen, yet they do.

School administrators have many responsibilities as well as people who work in school systems.

A small girl or boy standing outside a closed day-care center is a tragedy waiting to happen with the world we live in today.

Fortunately, other than the shock of the youngsters finding themselves alone in front of a building and the "nightmares" of their parents, nothing else serious happened to them.

Hopefully these incidents are a wake-up call to all school administrators in that they make sure that teachers, assistants and bus drivers all know the proper procedures in the delivery of students, even in downpours.

And most important, we hope we will never have to report such incidents happening in our area.

Garbiel (Gabby) Fouasnon, one of my longtime business acquaintances was laid to rest Saturday.

A native of France, Gabby and his wife Wanda came to Bay St. Louis in 1956. Their radio and radio repair shop, when I started at The Echo in 1957, was located in an old service station at the corner of Washington Street and Beach Boulevard.

As electronics began to be more present in the area, Gabby and his wife both working together in their shops, moved to television and other electronics.

Later they moved to Highway 90 as A-1 Television, and along the way became involved in appliances, furniture and as a Radio Shack store.

Gabby's expertise was in the electronics field, and I can remember he and his wife advertising their business with very small ads at the beginning in The Echo and increasing the sizes as their business grew.

Fouasnon was very active in the Bay St. Louis Rotary Club, which recognized him as a Paul Harris Fellow.

He served the club as sergeant-at-arms for many years until his death.

Gabby will surely be missed by his family, fellow Rotarians and many friends.

THE LEGISLATURE'S NEW SEAT BELT LAW

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reader concerned about litter's effect on sea life

To the Editor:

I recently saw a TV program about a young whale that had beached herself to die. She was rescued and sent to an aquarium for medical attention.

After three attempts, they removed an obstruction from her stomach that had stopped her from digesting food and growing into a healthy adult.

The obstruction was made of plastic wrappers, cigarette papers, mylar balloons and plastic containers.

As I walk on our beaches several times a week, I find the same sort of trash lining the water's edge.

This is not only unsightly, it poses a real danger to our marine life that we love and depend on here on the Gulf Coast.

I would like to ask our residents, guests and boaters to be more careful when disposing of trash.

We live in a beautiful area. Let's not make it look like a trash dump. If we want to continue to enjoy to catch and eat seafood, let's not kill the fish with our trash and garbage.

I also noticed that the trash cans are removed from the beach each fall, so even if concerned people wanted to deposit their trash in a receptacle, they are unavailable.

Who made the decision to remove the cans from the beach each fall? They are still used by many people in the winter, so please reconsider and return the cans to the beach. It only seems to make sense to me.

WASHINGTON REPORT

By State Senator Thad Cochran

Chairman, Subcommittee on International Security, Proliferation and Federal Services of the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs

I am very pleased to be able to announce the publication of The Proliferation Primer, which describes the findings from 11 hearings that were held last year by my Governmental Affairs Subcommittee on International Security, Proliferation, and Federal Services.

It identifies the principal suppliers of technology and components for weapons of mass destruction (WMD), missile delivery systems and key enabling technologies such as supercomputers and it discusses the increasing availability of ballistic missile technology and expertise.

Finally, it assesses the response of the Administration to this dangerous threat to America's national security.

The Primer contains information that paints an alarming picture, both because of the serious nature of the threat and because of the ineffectiveness of our government's response to the threat.

China was said by the Director of Central Intelligence recently to be "the most significant supplier of WMD-related goods and technology to foreign countries."

Russia is helping Iran build a missile that could be capable of attacking Israel in 12-18 months, and another one that could have Europe in range in as little as three years.

North Korea continues its attempts to build and market missiles of longer range, along with other missile technology. Even the United States, because of the Administration's decontrol of dual-use export controls on supercomputers, has provided computers to the nuclear war-pons complexes of Russia and China.

And, a vast amount of information, expertise and hardware, spurred by a revolution in information technology, is making missile proliferation easier every day.

Our subcommittee has found that the Clinton Administration has not been willing to take the tough actions necessary to back up its rhetoric in executive orders and other statements.

Sanctions have been used sparingly, if at all, against proliferators. In some cases involving Russia and China, the Administration has failed to initiate or complete its own formal process to determine if the facts of a situation warrant the imposition of sanctions.

While sanctions should not necessarily be the first or only tool used to fight proliferation, neither should they be abandoned as a means of trying to influence more responsible policies and actions by other nations.

Rhetoric alone is not enough to protect American interests.

The United States must do more to control proliferation, and this includes tougher actions and more creative nonproliferation policies.

However, we must admit that despite our best efforts — of diplomacy, arms control, export controls, and other efforts — and because ballistic missiles appear to be the delivery vehicle of choice for rogue nations, we will be inadequately protected as long as we have no deployed defense against long-range ballistic missiles.

The Proliferation Primer is released in the hope that better-educated policymakers, along with a public more aware of proliferation, will help promote action to reduce the proliferation threat and more effectively protect America.

REPORT FROM THE CAPITOL

By Lt. Governor Ronnie Musgrove

State has set priorities and needs to stick to them

Each new year presents us with an opportunity to positively influence the direction of our state. Remembering our commitments to providing quality public education, reducing crime in every community, and promoting our economy, we will be working with the Mississippi State Senate to find responsible ways to make life better for current and future generations of Mississippians.

As a state, we have set priorities, and we must find within ourselves the discipline and self-control to stick to them.

We made a commitment to providing quality educational opportunities, regardless of where a child lives, and we remain committed to funding the Mississippi Adequate Education Program.

Ninety-two percent of our children are educated in public schools across our state. These are our future college students, members of our work force, our neighbors and future leaders.

A multi-year investment in our schools is guaranteed to pay off in the long run for our children, our communities and our economy.

We will not back down in our fight to reduce senseless violent acts against our people.

If we are to deter and punish such crimes, we must expand our state's laws to include the death penalty as a punishment for the commission of multiple acts of or attempts to commit murder. In addition, we hope to place the Victims' Rights Amendment on the ballot. The rights of the accused are protected by the state constitution. Surely, the rights of victims deserve equal protection.

We want those who would commit criminal acts to know that justice will be served in Mississippi.

Safety goes beyond being free from the threat of crime. In many ways, our safety is linked to our health. Gov. Fordice and I were both fortunate enough to get the life-saving care we needed. We believe trauma care should be available to you no matter who you are or where you are in Mississippi.

We lose too many children every year to illnesses that could have been treated or prevented. For many of our working families, health insurance is a luxury they simply cannot afford. We have the opportunity this year to bring millions of dollars into our state to provide health care insurance for the children of these working families with a minimal investment. This investment is guaranteed to pay off for all of us in the long run.

We all have mental pictures of what home is and what it ought to be. Unfortunately for a growing number of Mississippi's children, home has become a place of fear or loss, either temporarily or permanently. For many of these children, our state's foster care system is their last stop before the streets.

We must have a system that is responsive and responsible. After all, childhood should be about hope, not fear, and home should mean love, not loneliness.

Preserving the Ethics Commission as a watchdog for the citizens of our state and pushing for campaign finance reform will top the agenda for making government more responsible.

Closing loopholes, holding candidates and office holders accountable for failing to file reports in a timely manner and other mechanisms designed to shed light on campaign financing are essential.

Campaigns are expensive propositions, but we must insure that the folks we elect to office will answer to all the people, not just to those holding the purse strings.

Our focus remains squarely on our people. Working together, we believe we can make a difference in the lives of our people today and insure a prosperous future for all our children, yours and mine. Like you, we look for the 1998 legislative session to be a session of sound policy, not sound bites.

IN AND AROUND DIAMONDHEAD

By Margaret Williamson

Mardi Gras, French for "Fat Tuesday," began many centuries ago as a pagan celebration of the spring season. As Christianity became the "religion" in the Roman Empire, the Church tried to eliminate this custom.

The pagans did not want to give up their celebration, so the Church turned it into a day of feast before the fasting of Lent and called it "Carnelavarre," Latin for "farewell to flesh."

The present term is "Carnival" and means a season of merriment. It starts on Jan. 6 and ends the day before Ash Wednesday (Mardi Gras Day).

In Mobile, Ala., a group of intoxicated young men were heading home after a New Year's Eve party. They stopped by a general store and purchased shovels, rakes, hoes and cowbells. The group went to the home of the mayor and raised a ruckus. The mayor invited them in, sobered them up, and suggested that they organize a parade for everyone to have fun.

The next year, 1831, the Cowbellion de Rakin Society was formed, and a New Year's Eve parade was held — complete with costumed riders on floats lit by flambeaus. By 1840 they had a theme, a ball, a parade and had become the forerunner to the first Mardi Gras krewe. In 1867, the Cowbellion de Ru-kin Society moved their New Year's Eve parade to Mardi Gras.

Some of the Cowbellions were living and working in New Orleans as cotton brokers. In 1857, they decided to hold a Mardi Gras parade to entertain the crowds in New Orleans. They chose the name of the Greek god, Comus, the god of revelry. They adopted the old English spelling of "crewe." The term stuck, and most Mardi Gras groups are known as "krewes."

In 1908, the Mississippi Coast held its first parade in Biloxi with King Bienville and Queen Ixolih (Biloxi backwards), floats, flambeau carriers and band, a grand marshal, the mayor and councilmen.

A group of women in a Wave-land drug store formed the Krewe of Nereids in 1966. They own their own den and floats. They hold a spectacular ball which had to be moved to the Mississippi Coast Coliseum, as so many people requested invitations. A few years ago, Nereids expanded its parade route into Bay St. Louis city limits.

The Krewe of Triton and the Krewe of Eros were organized in 1974 for men only. Triton paraded on Hwy. 90 on Mardi Gras, until they disbanded. The Krewe of Eros parades behind Nereids.

The Krewe of Diamondhead, formed in 1976 by a group of golfers, paraded in decorated golf carts.

King Ali'i Honua I and his Queen were the presidents of the men's and the ladies' golf associations. For the next seven years, the royalty were chosen by a committee who sought outstanding members of the community to serve as king and queen.

In 1983, the Krewe of Diamondhead started to incorporate with less than 100 members and the dues were $25 a couple. Officers were chosen under the terms of the by-laws. Three officers, elected every even year, serve for a two-year term. The captain and the lieutenants serve for life.

According to traditional krewe rules, the captain, who is the head of the organization, makes all the decisions. The officers and the lieutenants function under the direction of the captain.

Each year, the Krewe of Diamondhead's parade increases in size and includes a larger number of fabulous floats. In 1990, the Krewe of Diamondhead ceased to cross over the interstate to meet the Krewe of Kamehameka for safety and insurance reasons.

This year, the krewe will have its own doubloons minted and have expanded the membership. People are still on the waiting list after this increase. Plans are in the organizational stage to build a den to store the royalty float.

The Krewe of Diamondhead parade is Saturday, Feb. 21 starting at noon. The theme this year is "Music, Maestro, Please" and all are welcome to enter.

'Drive-up' beer may be banned

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Getting a six-pack in Magee, Miss., is as easy as driving through a red barn-style building on the main highway in town of about 3,600.

The store is among those in Mississippi that combine convenience with alcohol.

A proposal at the state capitol would ban some "drive-up" beer buying — one of a half dozen bills involving drinking and driving in the 1998 session.

Magee Police Chief Tom Royals supports several of the bills, including cracking down on teen drinkers and lowering the alcohol level required to be legally drunk.

But he is not upset with the "drive-thru" beer store in town.

"Everybody's got to make a dollar," he said. "Either they (people) are going to ride through or walk in and get it. It's just the same. It's just quicker."

The drive-up bill would not outlaw stores like the one in Magee designed solely for alcohol sales. But it would prohibit convenience and other type stores from selling beer through a window.

The bill, which has died previously at the state capitol, has the support of Mothers Against Drunk Driving in Mississippi.

"It's too convenient," said MADD executive director Rodger Moore. "It's just an opportunity to buy one for the road."

Rep. Eric Robinson, R-

Quitman, the bill author, said he knows of stores selling beer from back windows.

"We've got a lot of complaints they're selling it to the kids. That's an open invitation to (trouble)," he said.

Rep. Keith Montgomery, R-Clinton, who is pushing a separate drunk driving bill sought by MADD, sees no reason for a drive-up ban.

"I don't think that's the answer," he said. "You don't need to buy a cup of beer from a drive-through, but it's a legal product."

Montgomery, who has become an advocate of tougher drunk driving laws since his DUI conviction in 1995, said the key is stopping teen drinking.

He is working on a bill being promoted as "zero tolerance" for underage drinkers.

Teens caught with an alcohol level between .02 and .08 would have their licenses suspended 90 days for the first offense, six months for the second offense and until they're 21 the third time. They also would be fined.

Anyone with a level over .08 would be charged with drunk driving, under the bill. Now, the blood alcohol level for adults is .10.

Montgomery said the teen change is being prompted by Congress, which has threatened to cut federal money from states that do not change underage drinking laws.

The controversial part is the lower blood alcohol level.

"There's already opposition mounting," Montgomery said.

Rep. Ferr Smith, D-Carthage, said he supports penalties for drunk driving but feels lawmakers should not go too far.

"You may be charged with DUI after one beer. I don't think that's fair," he said.

Another option in the House was drafted by Rep. Joe Ellzey, D-Ellisville.

First proposed three years ago, it deals only with underage drinking and would require violators to do community service, as well as pay a fine.

"I wanted to get their attention. The parent can pay the fine and the kid gets off scott-free," Ellzey said.

In Magee, Chief Royals said community service would impact teens who drive "bumper-to-bumper" through town every Friday and Saturday night.

"There's some out there drinking," he said. "It (community service) would work on them because their friends would see them out there. It's embarrassing."

Royals also said he likes the idea of lowering the blood alcohol content to .08, which 15 other states have already done.

Rep. Tom Cameron, R-Greenville, said demonstrations of how alcohol affect driving sold him on the lower level. He said one demonstrator was "drunk as a skunk before he got to .10."

But he adds of fellow lawmakers, "everybody's hesitant to make a change."

Notes from legislature

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Notes from the 1998 Legislature's first week:

Latecomer — Rep. Herb Frierson, D-Poplarville, picked the wrong time to walk into the House Appropriations Committee meeting.

Chairman Charlie Capps, D-Cleveland, had just finished lightly scolding committee members for wandering in late to the panel meeting.

"This is the first and last time we are not going to start on time," said Capps.

As Capps reeled off the names of the new committee members, in walked the newcomer Frierson ... to laughter.

"He's doing bad right off," Capps said, motioning Frierson to a less-than-desirable seat at the front of the committee, two feet from Capps.

Early Meetings — Senate Elections Committee chairwoman Alice Harden runs a tight ship.

After she informed members she would be starting meetings earlier this year, at 8 a.m., an almost audible groan could be heard.

"In your former life were you a farmer or teacher or what?" asked Rep. Johnnie Walls, D-Greenville.

"In my former life, I was a school teacher, and we started at 7 a.m.," she replied.

Blackmon Again — Sen. Barbara Blackmon, D-Canton, was after the Finance Committee again.

Last year, Blackmon berated the committee — and mocked Chairman Hob Bryan, D-Amory, and Lt. Gov. Ronnie Musgrove — for producing a bill to increase the income tax exemptions for married couples.

Her target was the price tag — an estimated $10 million a year loss to the treasury over four years. She was scornful of the revenue loss when Bryan and Musgrove pushed in 1995 for increases in spending for the public schools.

Last week, Blackmon asked how much money would be lost from a bill that increased the value of estates exempt from taxes after a person's death.

"I don't know" was Sen. Alan Nunnelee's reply. The Tupelo

Republican was handling the bill before the Senate for the Finance Committee.

"You don't know?" Blackmon asked in an astonished tone to another "No" from Nunnelee.

Vacancy Filled — Rep. Earle Banks, a funeral home director with a law degree, might have a bright future.

He is the newest occupant of a cluster of chairs in the House chamber that have a reputation for good things.

Oliver Diaz who sat on the row in the early 1990s left to become a Court of Appeals judge. Eric Clark vacated a spot after winning the secretary of state's post in 1995. Barney Schoby departed for a seat on the Worker's Compensation Commission last year.

Rep. Tomie Green, D-Jackson, jokingly began accepting applications last year — with ambitious applicants preferred.

House Speaker Tim Ford took note of Banks, a Jackson Democrat, sitting in the row on the first day of the session: "Did he pass muster?" Ford asked.

"We'd like to talk to you about that," Green responded.

Quotes — "I think we'll probably keep bringing it back and keep bringing it back until we get it passed."

— Harden, on the third attempt to pass a Motor Voter election bill.

"In one instance I remember very clearly I told an official that 'I'm not fixing to fill up your sack. In the first place, I wouldn't know how, how much money to put in there, but it's totally against my principles and my company's principles and we're not going to play that way.'"

— Gov. Kirk Fordice, formerly a construction company executive, on corruption in the Department of Transportation, which he contends need appointed leaders.

"Even though everything may be above board it ... created a view of impropriety."

— Sen. Rob Smith, D-Richland, on the state's economic development chief receiving a salary supplement of more than $45,000 a year from private businesses.

Revamped Stennis home page makes its debut

NASA's Stennis Space Center is now online with its newly redesigned home page on the World Wide Web at <http://www.ssc.nasa.gov>.

Subject links featured on the new web site include information and images of NASA's three lines of business at Stennis — rocket propulsion testing, commercial remote sensing and Earth sciences.

Links about rocket propulsion test programs at Stennis contain separate links to the propulsion test complex, the Test Projects Office, the X-33 Reusable Launch Vehicle program and the Low Cost Technologies project.

Public programs featured in addition to the Visitors Center include the Educator Resource Center, the NASA-Stennis Speaker's Bureau and the "What's Happening" page that highlights upcoming events.

NASA's Procurement and Technology Transfer offices are featured under the link "Doing Business With NASA."

Under the Services category, users can find the Stennis telephone directory and a new feature called the Stennis Image Retrieval System, which includes 200 color images of Stennis and NASA-related subjects.

D'Angelo opera director

The board of directors of Gulf Coast Opera Theatre Inc. has announced the appointment of Judith D'Angelo of Pass Christian as administrative director, effective Jan. 12. The newly-created position involves coordinating the business activities of the local opera company, which was founded more than 40 years ago.

Upon her appointment, D'Angelo announced that a donor has provided space for an office for Gulf Coast Opera in the Colonnade Building in Pass Christian. Interestingly, the forerunner to today's opera theatre, the Theatre of the Arts, traces its beginnings to Pass Christian as well, having begun at the Shetlemore estate, Mid-Oaks.

D'Angelo has been music director at St. Paul Catholic Church in Pass Christian for the past 10 years. She has served on the board of Gulf Coast Messiah Chorus and is a board member of Coast Chorale.

"There are many challenges facing arts organizations today," D'Angelo said, "but with challenges come opportunities. I look forward to being a part of the changes taking place at Gulf Coast Opera Theatre."

Soccer roundup

Cannon scores three goals in OLA victory over PJP

Our Lady Academy beat Pope John Paul 6-1 Thursday in a high school soccer game played in Slidell.

Kristin Cannon kept up her hot pace, scoring three goals for the Crescents. Leslie Esher scored twice and Emily Meyers once as OLA improved its record to 10-2 in the non-district matchup.

Coach Karen Hunt said, "Pope John Paul made several good attacks, but the defensive efforts of Mikki Kenny, Missy McPhail, Jill Rutherford, Emilie Scianna and Lynn Dubuisson held them off. Ashley Artiques, Julie Reboul, Katie Dennis and Ashley Christman kept the midfield shut down, stopping attacks and advancing the ball to the forwards."

Oak Grove 1, OLA 0
The Oak Grove Lady Warriors scored in the final minutes of play to edge the visiting Our Lady Academy Crescents 1-0 in high school soccer action Saturday.

Earlier, Emily Meyers scored on a corner kick, but the goal was disallowed when the team was whistled for an off-sides penalty.

"We ran into an excellently skilled team," coach Karen Hunt stated. "Both teams played to their potential."

The Crescents are 10-3 overall and 8-2 in district play. OLA will host Harrison Central Friday at 5:30 p.m.

He is currently a member of the St. Stanislaus two-time state champion soccer team and the alpha honor roll. Wadsworth is also an employee of Little Ray's Restaurant in Waveland. ## Principal Hingle. Brother Hingle was the unanimous choice of the school's board of directors, and he too will serve for an indefinite term, beginning with the 1998-99 school session.

These proposed changes in the leadership were shared with the SSC faculty and staff through a special bulletin issued recently.

Speaking on behalf of the Provincial Council, Brother Paul Montero, SC, provincial, noted that the outstanding success achieved by the president and principal designates during the past two years at St. Stanislaus portended well for the continued well being and future of the school.

Before being assigned to St. Stanislaus two years ago, Brother Ronald Talbot served as principal of four different schools for a total of 14 years of administrative experience at that level. He served as principal of Vanderbilt Catholic High School in Houma, La. 1978-80; Catholic High School in Baton Rouge, 1980-84; St. John Elementary School in Montgomery, Ala. 1986-89; and E. D. White Catholic High School in Thibodaux, La., 1989-94.

He was assistant principal of Catholic High in Baton Rouge from 1973 to 1975 and director of student activities at Brother Martin High School in New Orleans during the 1976-77 school session.

In addition to his wealth of administrative experience, he served many years as a classroom teacher of mathematics, computer science and religion.

After receiving his bachelor of science degree from Spring Hill College in 1970, Brother Ronald earned two master of education degrees, one from Rutgers University in 1974 and the second from Boston College in 1985.

The Rutgers degree required an emphasis in mathematics education, and the Boston College one, an emphasis in educational technology. Brother Ronald has also undertaken additional study at Tulane, Loyola, Notre Dame, LSU and Xavier.

A native of New Orleans, Brother Ronald Talbot took his first vows as a Brother of the Sacred Heart in 1967. He has served on numerous educational and evaluating committees, both as chairman and member. He is a past member of the Baton Rouge Diocesan School Board, and he has directed in-service programs for math and science teachers on several different occasions.

Brother Ronald Hingle is also a native of New Orleans. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hingle of that city. He was graduated from Brother Martin High School in 1978 and obtained his bachelor of science degree in secondary education from Loyola University in 1983.

He earned a master of education degree in educational administration from Boston College in 1989.

Brother Hingle has served as a high school math teacher for four years; elementary school principal for four years; vocation director for three years; and high school dean of discipline for four years. His current assignment is vice-principal for discipline at St. Stanislaus.

All these changes will go into effect July 1.

Dearsa Narcisse, 3, of Bay St. Louis, describes shapes and items for speech pathologist Krystal Hunt at a recent community education seminar. Parents were informed of age-appropriate language and speech development prior to the free screening hosted by Hancock Medical Center and Rehab One.

Coast chamber now has Health Resource Council

The Mississippi Gulf Coast Chamber of Commerce has added a new committee to provide more health related resources to seniors in the Gulf Coast and surrounding areas.

A sub-committee, "The Health Resource Council," was formed by active members of the Maturity Market Committee and Coast healthcare professionals that recognized the need to expand the community's knowledge and increase their awareness on wellness and healthcare issues that affect our senior population and their families.

The Health Resource Council will be a resource to the communities along the Mississippi Gulf Coast on issues related to physical, mental, emotional and financial health.

The primary goal of the Health Resource Council will focus on educating the public on wellness and disease prevention.

The focus will be to provide information, understanding and resources for today's healthcare concerns; as well as upcoming events that offer health screenings and information.

In its infancy stage the committee has many plans for health awareness. The first project is to provide a newsletter entitled "Healthy Resources" to be published every other month and distributed throughout the Gulf Coast.

The newsletters will concentrate on providing reliable information on specific health related topics, a calendar of upcoming health fairs, events and screenings.

"Healthy Resources" will be free to the public and can be found in locations all along the Coast. Look for "Healthy Resources" in the lobbies of hospitals, doctors' offices, medical clinics, banks, library and any Coast Chamber office.

The newsletter will not be mailed out, but will be distributed to various locations by members of the Health Resource Council.

The first edition was recently distributed, and the next issue is scheduled for February. Anyone interested in participating on the Health Resource Council and/or the Maturity Market Committee may contact the Coast Chamber at (228) 863-2933.

MESC recovers $2 million in child support

A team effort between two Mississippi state agencies is leading to more money for children of deadbeat parents.

The Mississippi Employment Security Commission (MESC) announced it has collected almost $2 million for calendar year 1997 in delinquent child support payments.

The child support intercept program, started in November 1995, has brought in almost $3,664,406 since its inception.

A cooperative agreement with the Department of Human Services (DHS) enables MESC to withhold delinquent child support payments from unemployment insurance payments. MESC intercepts and forwards the money to Division of Child Support for distribution to parents who are owed delinquent child support.

"We're so happy to get this money in the hands of those who really need it — the families and children of Mississippi," said Tom Lord, MESC's executive director.

"We all know this would be a good program, but I don't think any of us realized how much a difference this would make."

Congress mandated the intercept several years ago, Lord says, but it could not be implemented in Mississippi because the state was not equipped for computer cross-matches.

Now, every unemployment insurance claimant who qualified for benefits is cross-matched with all the parents who, according to DHS records, owe child support.

Coast opera expanding

Suit

in operation adjacent to the subject property."

Neither County School Superintendent Terry Randolph or Board Attorney Steve Benvenuti would comment on the P&H's suit, which apparently caught school officials by surprise. Benvenuti did say he would appeal Terry's ruling.

On Monday, Terry ruled that the school district had not negotiated with all of the property owners before the suit was first filed. The property was initially owned by Joseph Riccabono but is now owned by his heirs.

School Board President Cheryl Bennett said on Tuesday she was surprised by Terry's ruling.

"The matter of jurisdiction did not even come up," Bennett said.

Terry's ruling apparently voids an appeal to the state Supreme Court the P&H had filed regarding an intervention issue. Last fall, P&H attorney Ronnie Artigues argued that the Commission should be allowed to intervene in the school district's eminent domain proceedings.

Artigues' motion was denied, and final briefs were only recently filed with the high court.

The school district had hoped to advertise for bids for the new middle school and an elementary school in Kiln in early February, and award those bids in early March. But Terry's ruling, and the P&H's suit has delayed the middle school's timetable.

Bennett said the site in question was chosen because of its proximity to Hancock High School, thereby allowing the middle school to use the high school facilities. If another site has to be used, she said it will cost the taxpayers more money, and the school would not include all of the amenities scheduled to go in the one at the Hancock High site.

"We will have to look for more money, and we won't have it," Bennett said.

Voters approved a $20 million bond last spring so the district could build the two new schools.

eddie Favre and Councilwoman Carleen Moran to the panel. Waveland Aldermen have appointed Mayor John Mason and businessman Tommy Kid their representatives.

In other business at Wednesday's meeting of the Solid Waste District, Curtis Johnson, who owns an already-permitted rubbish site and landfill off Fire Tower Road, asked the District to amend its 20-year solid waste plan.

He wants to be allowed to be able to accept and recycle tires on a portion of his property.

The request was tabled because plans are being made that would allow blanket approval of several other requests that have been made to amend the county's 20-year plan.

Revenues exceed expectations

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — More than $123 million in gaming revenue is expected to flow into the Mississippi treasury during the fiscal year ending June 30, representing 4.15 percent of the estimated $2.96 billion budget.

A report released Wednesday by the Legislative Budget Office showed $111 million in state gaming revenue is being returned to cities and counties where casinos are operating and being put into a fund for highway construction in gambling areas.

"I don't think anybody ever thought we'd be getting this kind of money from gaming. We'd certainly be $236 million worse off if we didn't have it," said Rep. Charlie Capps, D-Cleveland, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Capps said despite talk of a "leveling off" at some future point in gaming revenues, it has not arrived.

"Getting to this point (in revenues) was a farfetched idea several years ago," he said. "If the coast becomes a real resort destination point, which it very well could be, and the same happens in Tunica, this figure could increase."

There are 29 state regulated casinos in seven counties.

The report compiled by state budget experts shows public education programs will receive $48.2 million from gaming this fiscal year, with higher education getting $21 million. Social welfare programs are drawing $12.9 million from gaming.

Senate Appropriations Chairman Dick Hall, R-Madison, agreed the state "would be in a heck of a position if we didn't have these revenues."

"It has certainly helped in spots like the coast and Tunica, but we've got so many other things going on — telecommunications, the furniture industry in northeast Mississippi, Peavey Electronics (in Meridian) and Howard Industries (a lighting fixtures firm in Laurel)," Hall said.

Bruce Nourse, an executive with Casino Magic in Bay St. Louis, said gaming officials predicted in January 1992 about $17 million in gaming revenues.

"I'll never forget looking at the $25 million in ABC (Alcohol and Beverage Control) revenues and thinking we'd be in good shape if we could ever pass ABC. This (gaming revenues) is beyond anyone's wildest dreams," Nourse said.

In fiscal 1997, alcohol and beverage revenues were $54.1 million, said ABC officials.

Advertising group seeks entries

The Mississippi Gulf Coast Federation has issued its Call for Entries for the 1997-98 Mississippi Coast American Advertising Awards Competition.

The annual MSG American Advertising Awards Competition recognizes exceptional advertising created in the Mississippi Gulf Coast market. The American Advertising Awards honor advertising excellence in all media including print, broadcast, out-of-home and public service advertising.

All entries must be received by 5 p.m. Jan. 23 at The Sun Herald. Entry fees are $30 for members of the Mississippi Gulf Coast Ad Federation.

A distinguished panel of advertising creative executives will gather in Biloxi the weekend of Jan. 31 to select the winners from an anticipated 350 entries. To be eligible for consideration of an American Advertising Award (ADDY), all work must have been published or aired between Jan. 1, 1997 and Dec. 31, 1997.

The Mississippi Gulf Coast Advertising Awards winners will be honored during a dinner gala Feb. 27 at the Treasure Bay Casino Resort in Biloxi. Winners of the MGC American Advertising Awards are eligible to compete in the second level of the three-tiered National American Advertising Awards competition, the District 7 American Advertising Awards.

The District 7 winners are then eligible for the ultimate competition, the National American Advertising Awards, presented in June every year by the American Advertising Federation.

The Mississippi Gulf Coast American Advertising Awards

Competition is sponsored by the Mississippi Gulf Coast Advertising Federation, a member association comprised of advertising and media professionals.

Proceeds from the ADDY's help support the Mississippi Gulf Coast Ad Federation educational programs, public service projects and proactive government relations efforts.

For information or to receive an American Advertising Awards entry packet, contact Christie Fountain, the ADDY Award competition coordinator, at 875-2261, ext. 235.

Halter to acquire shipyard

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — Halter Marine Group Inc. has said it has signed a letter of intent to acquire the stock of three companies that comprise the operations of Calcasieu Shipyards Inc., headquartered in Sulphur, La.

The 35-year-old shipyard, located on the Calcasieu River about 17 miles north of Cameron, La., has about 170 employees and full-service repair and conversion services and specialized new construction.

Terms were not disclosed, but Halter said the acquisition should be completed during the first quarter of 1998. When acquired, the yard will be known as Halter-Calcasieu.

Calcasieu has three 2,000-ton floating dry docks, a 400-ton railway and a complete machine shop. In addition to construction, the yard has fully permitted gas freeing facilities that include large volume fuel storage, oil and chemical barge cleaning, pressure barge flaring and nitrogen interting.

Halter Marine Group Inc. includes 20 shipyards in Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Florida. The shipyards have built more than 2,600 vessels in the past 40 years.

Power outage reported

Approximately 1,800 customers living in and around Ansley, Pearllington and Lakeshore were affected by a power outage that occurred Sunday, Jan. 11 at 8:10 p.m.

Coast Electric Power Association reports that the substation lost power when an arres-tor detected a flashover.

Repair crews were immediately dispatched, and all power was restored by 9:20 p.m.

Edward Jones excels in national surveys

Edward Jones ranked No. 1 for the fifth consecutive year in a survey conducted by Registered Representative magazine, and rose 62 spots to be ranked 208th among the nation's 500 largest private companies in Forbes magazine's December issue.

"It's exciting to be recognized by such well-respected publications," says Craig W. Foster and Timothy V. Burns, of the local Edward Jones offices. "Registered Representative survey shows that Jones investment representatives believe the firm is superior and the Forbes survey highlights our commitment to strong growth."

The Registered Representative survey is conducted nationwide, polling 400 randomly selected brokers representing the leading eight financial-services firms.

Fifty brokers from each firm were asked to rank their employees on 19 categories such as overall ethics and freedom from pressure to sell certain products. Jones ranked No. 1 in 14 of the 19 categories.

In the Forbes survey, the St. Louis, Mo. based firm reported revenues of $952 million with operating profits of $124 million and net profits of $93 million. With nearly 12,000 employees and more than 3,700 branch offices nationwide, Edward Jones is the fastest growing investment firm in the country.

The firm plans to expand to 10,000 offices in the next decade. Along with the increase in offices, revenues for the firm have grown from $16 million in 1977 to $952 million today.

"Both rankings are evidence of the firm's focus on customer service, its long-term investment strategy and the close relationships between its investment representatives and their customers. It's a winning combination," said Foster.

The survey by Registered Representative also reported that the quality of Jones research rose to No. 2 — a dramatic improvement over past years, and a testimony of the firm's commitment to improving its level of service to brokers. In the past three years,

Jones research ranking has advanced from seventh to second place.

For the purpose of the Forbes ranking, a company is defined as private if it "doesn't have enough common shareholders to be forced to be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, or if it has a lot of shareholders but they are limited to a select group, such as employees." Edward Jones is structured as a private partnership.

"Because Jones offices are located in communities across the country, our investment representatives can offer individuals personal, face-to-face service," says Foster. "But don't let the simple, store-front offices fool you. Because of our size, we attract financial analysts who are tops in the field, and the firm is able to offer technology that allows its brokers access to up-to-the-minute market and financial information through a satellite network — the largest in the industry."

Jones investment representatives offer individual investors a mix of securities, including mutual funds, insured tax-free bonds, certificates of deposit and common stocks of companies with histories of solid growth and sound management.

The firm's philosophy revolves around personal service aimed at helping customers achieve their long-term financial goals.

Foster's office is located at 845 C Hwy. 90, Bay St. Louis. The office phone number is (601) 467-9400. Burns' office is located at 137 A Hwy. 90, Waveland. The office phone number is (601) 467-6869.

Ole Miss scientists develop computer model for predicting traffic noise

A computer program now being refined at the University of Mississippi is expected to become the industry standard for predicting highway traffic noise levels.

A $200,000 one-year contract from the U.S. Department of Transportation is making this sophisticated computer modeling possible at the university's National Center for Physical Acoustics. The program is scheduled for release in 1998.

"The driving force behind this research is a quality of life issue," said Dr. James P. Chambers, a research scientist for the NCPA.

"People are living in more and more densely populated areas where noise pollution is a real problem. If we can predict noise levels around highways, we can more efficiently plan mitigation techniques, such as noise barriers, and we can better plan future construction to improve quality of life."

Chambers and Dr. Henry Bass, NCPA director, are the project's co-principal investigators. Also working on the computer model is Dr. Richard Rappett, professor of physics and astronomy.

Imprecise noise models can be costly, Bass said, explaining this improved program's significance. "In the past, we have relied upon these noise models to plan community growth and plan for buyouts of homes in noisy areas. And too often we have not bought out the right place. In the long term, this project should allow us to save a great deal of money."

The refined model will include factors such as different vehicle types, traveling speeds, pavement types and sound barriers.

One challenge is diffraction, or the bending of sound around barriers and buildings. Predictions of how sound waves behave become more complicated every time the waves bend around an object.

Laboratory scale-model experiments to measure the effects of diffraction around various barriers will help refine the model.

The model will also include researchers' data measuring sound waves traveling over grass, gravel, asphalt and other surfaces.

Accounting for atmospheric disturbances also makes building an accurate model challenging. For example, neighborhood residents living near a football field know how wind gusts alternately carry or mask the game crowd's cheers on breezy days, Chambers said. Noise pollution varies around highways for similar reasons. The refined computer program will factor in temperature changes, rain, wind and other weather conditions.

The model will help highway planners decide the best and most economical use of sound barriers and also the best placement for new roads to reduce noise pollution. An important question is whether sound barriers are the best solution in every case.

"In this country, we are spending a lot of money on highway barriers," Chambers said. "In 1995, we spent $141 million in the United States on sound barriers. Between 1970 and 1995, it was $1.5 billion. It's becoming more and more of a problem as we get more and more congested."

A long-range goal for the model is that it will eventually incorporate noise levels from all types of transportation, including airports, railroads and perhaps even seaports. U.S. Sen. Thad Cochran (R-Miss.) helped the NCPA to secure the one-year renewable contract with 100 percent federal funding. Chambers said, "We hope this will be the start of an ongoing project."

NCPA scientists are a good choice to perform this work, Bass said. "The NCPA acoustics group at the University of Mississippi has been involved in predictions of outdoor sound dating back to 1971 or 1972. Our expertise and background have been concerned with the basic science. This project gives us a chance to use that expertise to advance the engineering state of the art."

After flooding: tips for cleaning and disinfecting

It is important to begin cleanup as soon as possible. The first priority is to get rid of visible dirt, then invisible germs. Use a disinfecting solution to ensure bacteria and viruses are eliminated.

Mildew also flourishes in wet conditions. It grows when it has a source of oxygen, nutrients, moisture and warmth. Mildew can grow on clothes, furnishings and walls and is very difficult to control (if it has a good start). Liquid bleach (5.25% sodium hypochlorite) will clean up and prevent the spread of mildew.

When disinfecting heavily soiled surfaces, it is important to change the disinfecting solution frequently to ensure effectiveness. It should be changed when the solution becomes cloudy.

To protect against microbial contamination, wear protective clothing on hands, arms, and face.

Dry surfaces as soon as possible after water damage to prevent growth of mold and mildew. Place items in direct sunlight if possible.

Here are some specific recommendations for cleaning and disinfecting various items that can often be salvaged.

Interior Surfaces
Mildew generally abounds after water damage, to it's important to get surfaces dried and disinfected quickly.

Clean and disinfect hard surfaces, such as floors, walls, counters, dishes, glass and plastic ware, as soon as flood waters recede.

Remove loose debris, then wash down the area with the disinfecting solution. Keep surfaces wet for 2 minutes and rinse with purified water.

If possible, large items should be cleaned and dried outside to avoid spreading contaminants in the house.

Solid wood furniture can usually be repaired and cleaned, but wood veneer often separates and warps.

Upholstered furniture, carpets and bedding soak up contaminants from flood waters and should be cleaned only by a professional.

Unless the piece is an antique or very valuable, upholstered furniture soaked by flood waters should probably be thrown out.

Get a cost estimate from a professional to see if furniture is worth saving.

All submerged household appliances must be clean and dry before using them. What is salvageable is often tricky, so be sure to discuss what can/cannot be saved with your electrician.

Also, to reduce odors and to kill germs that may result from sewage backup in the toilet, pour one cup household liquid bleach into the bowl. Brush entire bowl and let the solution stand for 10 minutes. Flush again.

Outdoor Items
For exterior surfaces contaminated with flood waters, first clean area with power hose, then apply disinfecting solution. Keep surface wet with the disinfecting solution for 2-10 minutes. Rinse thoroughly.

Children's toys, play equipment and outdoor furniture that have come in contact with contaminated waters need disinfecting, too.

Kitchen Items and Food Safety Issues
To disinfect dishes by hand, remove visible dirt, then soak 2 minutes in disinfecting solution. Rinse well with purified water.

Discard all soft plastic and porous items, such as wooden spoons and cutting boards, baby bottle nipples and pacifiers, which may have absorbed contaminants.

Dispose of food items — including canned goods — that may have come in contact with flood waters.
